Some Flowers of the Sierra Foothills

By Mrs. Agnes L. Benson

It was during a ride over the "North Trail" from Ilana Ranch to Dunlap Ranch while the author was in the canyon, that the first spring flower came to my notice. Under a sheltering manzanita was a small tongue of flame, the Indian Warrior (Pseudotsuga). The manzanita had taken up the mantle. Nothing in Maine resembles the Warrior; the leaves are like those of the carrot and often shade to bronze; the short stalk is surrounded by a raceme of brilliant red flowers so slender and delicate that the petals of one flower, later whole war-pieces marched under the manzanita.

One cannot name the flowers in the order in which they make their appearance, since altitude and slope have so much effect. For instance, manzanita was in blossom an hour's ride to the west at that time, but before they were here, while an hour's ride to the north west they were two weeks later than here. Also, there are so many flowers (many of them differing but little from varieties of the same species) that it is impossible to describe all those found by an amateur and rather desultory botanist, so mention in particular will be made of only the more striking.

The manzanita is a shrub often ten or fifteen feet in height with almost round evergreen leaves of soft bluish green and much the texture of stiff suede, and beautiful satiny dark red bark. The branches and leaves are very crooked and it is said there is a standing offer of $1,000 for a three-foot stick of manzanita without a crook or knot. The color comes early in the spring and their individual appearance is that of a marsh anemone of the Maine swamps but they are in clusters the size of the bird's nest and vary in color from a faint and elusive blue to a deep violet, deep yellow with a shade of brown on the back.

Accompanying the nemophila and pansies were the shooting star, or wild cyclamen (Dodecatheon Meadia) of soft rose color with yellow center.

One day riding to the Teaford Ranch, along a rather wet ditch, I saw the familiar leaves of the trillium and hastened to get an old friend (the first except the buttercup that I had seen), but instead of the well-known three-petaled flower, I found only three long, narrow petals rising straight up from the axils of the leaves—Trillium sessile Californica not the Wake-robin.

The advance guard of the Brodiaeas was the graceful Capitata, a cluster of deep violet flowers on long, slender stems and an ideal blossom for a vase, one bouquet of them lasting for over three weeks with occasional renewals of the water.

Then came the Harvest Brodiaea (B. grandiflora) tall scape bearing a number of pale blue flowers, and the most common of the bunch, the first except the buttercup that I had seen, but instead of the well-known three-petaled flower, I found only three long, narrow petals rising straight up from the axils of the leaves—Trillium sessile Californica not the Wake-robin.

nuisance which animals will not eat, with viscid exudation which blackens the legs and faces of animals, sticks to wool, and nearly ruins clothing coming in contact with it, but which has a pungent balsamic odor that is pleasing. Mixed with it is the larger flowered Madia elegans, or Wild Coreopsis, which has a similar yellow corolla and yellow center to that of the garden Coreopsis but larger and with narrower petals. It opens at sunset and closes before the heat of the next day, and, alas, though beautiful it, too, is sticky.

Where the cattle have not cropped it, there is goldenrod of a sort, but lacking the beauty of that in the East.

One glorious blossom has come to lend color to the late summer and sandy wastes are ablaze with the Scarlet Bugler (Penstemon bridgesii). It grows to a height of several feet and the blossoms, which make one think of the Cardinal Flower, are two inches or more long, borne in a long spike, and a vivid scarlet.

I wish space would permit the mention of more flowers of which one hundred and more species and varieties were identified and some twenty or thirty more found that I failed of identification—an old Gray's Botany text book and a very incomplete "Wild Flowers of California" comprising a reference library—and I wish still more (as I often did through the spring months) that the Twin-Town Nature Club might have been our guests during the height of the season.

California's flowers admit of but two criticisms—very few have any odor (still fewer a pleasing one) and the flowers come in such abundance through so short a flowering season that there is no time to truly enjoy individuals.

Bonney Hauling Pulp—Guests at Bartlett's.

Thursday evening, August 31st, an over size bus came from Rumford through the Green Woods to Edgar Barrett's barn dance, where ten couples abode.

Oh, boys, upon Friday morning, September 1st, Carl Bonney who is employed by Lester Packard of Buckfield hit the Green Woods Route with the latest thing in an eight cylinder Ford truck owned and very recently purchased by Lester who has eighteen hundred cords of pulp wood to haul to the Rumford paper mills for Amos Foster. Carl is capable of handling the position, he is holding, having for several years held the wheel on trucks varying from a five ton Red to a one long Ford. Carl makes three trips to Rumford every day the Oxford is running and never carries less than two and a half cords of wood. The time three cords. This machine was purchased from that live wire dealer of West Sumner, Harold Turner, the price paid to have been eight hundred dollars.

Saturday morning, September 2nd, Mr. C. E. Forsberg of Upton, Mass. drove to Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Bartlett's for over the week end, got here at five p. m. Left their car and baggage, then drove to Rumford, where they had an invitation to tea with the Rev. Esther Haskard who was a former neighbor of theirs. They returned to Bartlett's early in the evening to find that the Bartlett boys had left their car at the camp ground selected by them as they were desirous of one night camping where in early morning they could look out at the sun rising over the lofty mountains of good old Mt. Katahdin.

Mr. and Mrs. Forsberg accompanied by Lionel Bartlett, the Maine gem gatherer, took a trip to Norway Mine where they enjoyed a two mile hike and brought out several small pieces of gem stone. That evening they took Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell for a short even- ing. On Sunday morning, September 3rd, at ten o'clock they started for home. Mr. Forsberg works at construction work and reports business booming with his company.

The Children's Corner

The Game of What Do You See

Put out the chart of pictures given here and mount it on a piece of cardboard. The players sit in a circle and the chart is placed in the center, covered over. The captain counts three, uncovers the picture chart, counts fifteen and covers it up again. Each player must write down a list of the things he remembers seeing in the picture. The one who remembers the most wins.

The Musical Pie

To play and sing, cut out and paste on cardboard. Then pin through the center on a square of cardboard and let Mother turn it for you.

Lost and Found

LOST—A baby's shoe, for the right foot. Find or please leave at this office.

THE RESPONSIBILITY IS YOURS

You, the reader of this article, control the nation's fire loss.
What you do about it will determine the size of the loss this year and for years to come. In the past, you are careless and ignorant, fire waste will continue to cost ten thousand and live and half a billion dollars annually. If, on the other hand, you take the little extra expense that will save so much, you will learn the few lessons, go so far as to learn that will outlast fire so far as your own property is concerned, loss will drop to a fraction of former losses.
Perhaps your electric wiring hasn't been expertly examined for a long time. Perhaps there are piles of rubbish in your garage or attic or basement. Perhaps your heating plant and flues are in need of overhauling and repair. If so, you are "asking" for a fire. It may be a small fire or a great one but it will cost you money, as will every other catastrophe. You will pay through rates, through taxes, through loss of business and employment.
Fire is never an individual matter. It touches the whole community, the whole nation. It is individual only in so far as the loss is concerned—and that's where you, as an individual, can do an invaluable work.

COOPERATION AND CIVILIZATION

The work shop for the member of a farm cooperative is in his home backyard. Right there, in the country community, is where America is going to be made over in the next ten years or so. The city has had its run. While cities were heading the parade, it was city men who led it. Now good roads and automobiles are giving the country community something everything that the city has, on top of the kind of life that the city never did and never will have.
Farmers' cooperative associations will head the parade in the new movement, as chambers of commerce led in city building. The farm community that gets the most out of this new age will be the one that does the most, and it will have to be through cooperation—work, not meddling.
The farm cooperative is, in the full sense of the word, civilizing agencies. They are developing a better life for the farmer and the farm family, as well as a more prosperous one. They are a social force as well as an economic machine.
The farmer who joins a cooperative, works with and for it, and gives it his loyal support, is working for himself, his neighbors and the American family generally. Agriculture has many problems and the cooperative ideal touches them all.

We're apt to think that those who think we are very intelligent.
Be sure you know exactly what you're going after or you may run past it.

Coming Events

Sept. 17—Band Concert, Stanwood Park, Farmington, 8:45 p. m.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

Walter H. Nevey of Boston, Mass., representative of the Harris-Seybold-Potter Company of Cleveland, was a caller, Monday, at the Advertiser office. He is a very capable business and pleasure.

The Vermont Newspaper Corporation

of Bellows Falls, Vt., has failed all of itself in getting out a 150th anniversary edition of one of the four papers it publishes: The Vermont Journal of Windsor, Vermont. It is a winding "ship-of-foresight" covering the period with advertising and pictures brought up to date and spread over 16 8-column pages. Some big job! Issued August 11, 1933.

We had a pleasant call, Tuesday,

G. S. Pingree of Ashland, Mass. Mr. Pingree was born in Norway in 1865 and was a subscriber to the Advertiser for forty years. He is employed on the Boston & Albany Railroad as signal man, a position he held for forty-nine years. Next year he will retire on pension. He is still a very active and healthy and happy in his enjoying life. He is still a very active and healthy and happy in his enjoying life. He is still a very active and healthy and happy in his enjoying life.

Mrs. Lora Foster of Bryant Pond says:

"In looking over some old papers, I found the enclosed receipt which may be of interest to you. It reads:

To A. B. Davis, Co., Dr.
For the Norway Advertiser, No. 1, Vol. 3, No. 1, Vol. 5.
Received Payment,
B. Davis & Co.,
Norway, Me., Nov. 1, 1848.

Ira Hobbs was my grandfather, my mother's father. —Mrs. Lora Foster.

Personal remarks from D. Cromett

Clark of Somerville, Mass.: "Forty-six years ago, I came to the Advertiser office as printer's devil. You, Mr. Sanborn, are the only person now connected with the Advertiser who was there when I arrived, and only one who is still in the same position. It is a great pleasure to me to find that the only piece of equipment that was then in the plant and is still there is the sink where we washed our hands."

Miss Gladys Smith: "Last winter I had the pleasure of visiting the town of Fryeburg, Me., and the home of George Goshen, a native of Fryeburg. Her home is a beautiful place for an author. Mr. Hill has also a mission in the old Leiper Church on Fairview Road, where she holds a service of prayer and other meetings. Mr. Hill has also held many meetings in different churches. Her sermons are in story form, very interesting and helpful. Her services are well known and are a blessing to all who read and listen to her. After visiting the home and mission of Mr. Hill and talking with her, it makes the books more real to one that she has written and I would say that you read Mr. Hill's books that they are helpful reading, especially for the young people and her life is lived like her books."

D. Cromett Clark writes: Artemus Ward and "Artemus Ward" were not the same man. Artemus was the first general comedy, and the American Continental soldiers as existed at the beginning of our American Revolutionary War, and was at Cambridge with a larger force than that at Charleston at the time of the battle of Bunker's Hill. A big British raid to the westward was planned, but did not happen. His grandson (or maybe great-grandson) Artemus Ward, long the head of the Sapolito business and one of the State's most successful advertising men, wrote a book about the old general who was displaced by George Washington in the army command. "Artemus" was the Waterford native and his great-grandson has got mentally confused with Artemus.

MAINE HILL BILLY

Hello Everybody: Just heard of a new move for the sake of hereafter prosperity. It is going to be almost a crime to give up much of the single nation of Germany. The government has in the making a law which will compel every bachelor over twenty-five to pay an excise tax for his freedom, also, every married man who has no children, must within five years will also be taxed accordingly. I am hoping that Mr. Roosevelt, that great man that is going places and doing things so suddenly, will give us much notice of this law. It is a plan for he may take it seriously and may embarrass the multitude. He may forbid these single boys and selfish married couples from displaying their grand and popular children of the nation.

Labor day is now left in our wake and a real year of work is commencing, and this happily, is the year of hope. The country is no longer drifting, drifting, pushed from the stage of mourning to the stage of action. For our United States there is ahead property, the great as has ever been known, and indefinitely greater. For the individual there are prizes to be won greater than have been won before. It will be of course, dependent on how low we as citizens in reality work.

In thirteen years of dry America, our cities got confirmed in the back yard and basement. Zoning laws and drinking laws, there were the large wholesale food stores, of course presenting a plate glass front to the street. But good cheer required behind locked doors. The bright lights were needed to draw the shutters and blinds, to make the place look uninhabited. Europeans came to our country to be fascinated by the adventure of drinking in our very respectable cities. It is a great pleasure to realize that the American is still officially dry, except for 3.2 beer and wine, which by act of Congress are not wet at all. But beer and the prospect of proximate repeal of the eighteenth amendment have within a few months destroyed the tradition that was thirteen years in the making. They have cut out the peculiar distinction of our cities as one of the great pleasures of the world. They have brought to us the sidewalk cafes. This week our Pine State voters hustled to the polls to cast the majority of their ballots for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. They stuck to their fast. An old timer down here in the Bay State claims that in all the dry years that Maine has experienced, he has never could find anybody who was thirsty while visiting in Maine and he realized he always had plenty of company. "So goes Maine, So goes the Nation." After the pine State sticks to its fast, it is a little hard to believe this will be a real modern 1934 country.

The press had been hard up for news so they have started a revolution in the State of God Save the Battle Ship Maine" if she goes down that way. When the sailors and marines come back from their sojourn in Cuba they can tell in Atlantic City, N. J., that the ship Maine" if she goes down that way. That is the kissing marathon. It won't be long before a couple will be named the champion of the kissing marathon. "Win a title, but what a modern world. So, I'll be seeing you."

—Just a Maine Hill Billy.

A Crop of Wild Game

Scheme Which Sounds as if it Might
Pay in Some Oxford County Places

Boston Transcript Editorial

The suggestion of Dr. George W. Field, biologist, that home-raised fish might be a source of income to the farmer is now being considered by the institution of a game management department which, during the next five years, will try to develop and apply methods of raising game birds and animals as a part of regular farming operations. This interesting project has been adopted by the University of Wisconsin under the direction of Aldo Leopold, author of the American text of game management, formerly of the United States Forest Service, nationally known authority on conservation and for four years, its associate director of the University of Wisconsin Forest Products Laboratory.

Mr. Leopold will direct the department as tenant of a chair of game management in the university. Financial support of the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation to the College of Agriculture is among the very few game management projects which have been sponsored by this institution. It will require little initial investment for the individual farmer, who will be the natural custodian of State game which ranges his land, and is encouraged deliberately by the State to become the manager of pheasant, quail, rabbit, duck, and other game on their recreational and economic value. In Wisconsin alone are millions of acres of marginal and tax-deferred lands and it is hoped also that the game management project will provide an additional incentive for conservation practice. In addition, with the technical co-operation of the universities, it is believed the project will be of growing value as a cover for the best methods of growing game, so that every farm can produce game as a by-product of regular farming.

In 1932 Mr. Leopold formulated the game management section of the conservation plan, and has been in the Southwest Federal erosion projects, in which the conservation of fish figures also.

Describing the administration of the project, Dean Chris L. Christensen points out that the department is expected to furnish the farmer through an arrangement with which hunters will pay him a reasonable fee for his share in a triple game-raising project of State, land-owner and farmer. Incidentally, the system would avoid the misunderstandings between the three groups, and operate to the benefit of all three. It will be demonstrated in Wisconsin in the arboretum on typical farms in various areas of the State.

Division of crops has been a prime item in many sections, but the idea of conservation through the raising of fish and game is relatively new. It has found support in Massachusetts, however, in the character of fish, as the dam construction of the C. C. C. in Andover testifies; and the enthusiastic backing of sportsmen applied to game also and the scheme included as an integral part of regular farming. It is shown that the project is being congratulated upon having pioneered in this novel branch of farm life and its experience doubtless can be developed upon for the development of scientific methods, which will serve as models for other communities.

MERGED WITH KEZAR FALLS

The holiday brought to a close the career of a mail carrier of Fred Huntress, who has arrived at the age limit of 65. He has completed 28 years of continuous service.

During the first twelve years he missed only one scheduled trip over his route, considered one of the highest in New England. This route leads from Freedom Village to Cushing's Corner, up by the White Meeting House to Sweet's Hill, over close to the Maine line and back to Freedom.

Over this route, 13 3/4 miles long, Mr. Huntress has used four horses and one automobile. Two of the horses were in service for twelve years each and traveled in mileage in excess of 50,000. Mr. Huntress has not lost more than ten days on the route because of sickness since he took it over Dec. 1, 1905. As he leaves the route not one of the original boxholders survives.

During his twenty-eight years of service he has taken his mail from five different postmasters and from six different postoffice locations.

With the close of his work the route will be merged with the Kezar Falls route, making one 38 miles long.

WEST STONEHAM

Reunion of Gammon and McAllister Families.

The annual reunion of Gammon and McAllister families was held on Sept. 10 at the old home place in West Stoneham. It was a fine get-together and much enjoyed by all. Not as many people as last year, but nearly sixty enjoyed a picnic lunch. There were ninety present.

Those present were W. C. Brooks, Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Max Eastman and two children, Lovell; James L. Barker, (Mr. Barker is very smart for 77 years); George Bellar, South Lincoln; Harold Gammon, Ernest and Clayton Gammon, West Paris; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bennett, South Paris; Mrs. Ina Wilberger and daughter, Norma, Norway; Mrs. Bertha Kenston, Kent's Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Willie McKean and son, North Waterford; Mr. and Mrs. O. Luck, Bridgton; Mr. and Mrs. Knox Bickford and three children; Prof. and Mrs. Edward Brown and two children, Norway; Mr. and Mrs. Uralah Gammon and three children, Norway; Mrs. Isma Culenah, Mechanic Falls; Mr. and Mrs. John Grover and three children; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Harriman and son, No. Lovell; Harold Bacheider, Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Green, Portland; and Edora Coleman, North Waterford. Mr. and Mrs. B. McKean, Donald Andrews, North Lovell.

Much of the success of these meetings is due to the never failing kindness and interest of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Grover and their family who live on the old place. Much credit is due them. One thing was noted—over half of the company present was composed of the family of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McKean (see Stella Gammon) and their children and families.

They have sixteen grandchildren, all but one, Harry Andrews, were present. Their seven daughters, six of them married, were there with their families.

A short business meeting was held after lunch and a ball game played. This time the married men won the single men. Some took a ride to the family cemetery over in the "back district" and it is very surprising how the old "school paths" have grown up to trees. The pond near where the old schoolhouse stood is all dried up and trees growing where the skating pond used to be—time makes many changes and "waits for no man"—that is life!

All returned to their numerous homes except Mr. Barker, Mr. Bellar and Bertha Kenston, who stayed in Norway with Mr. and Mrs. P. Wilberger that night and went, on Monday, to South Lincoln, leaving Mrs. Kenston at Kent's Hill, where she is beginning her third year as matron of Kent's Hill school.

About thirty gathered at the Beaver Pond for a corn roast, Saturday evening. George Abbott and Herman Cole have been working for Arthur Whitman, digging potatoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Downing of Mechanic Falls were at Walter Russ' over the week end.

Bernard McMillan was in Bethel, Saturday for dental work.

Mrs. Clinton Buck and Mrs. Maxine Marble are working in the mill at West Paris.

The Liberty Bell proclaimed "liberty throughout all the land" and then, somehow, it got cracked.

BOLSTER'S MILLS

ANNUAL REUNION OF THE SPURR AND WESTON FAMILIES

One day in Pomona Grange the members were asked to name and say a few words about "The most beautiful spot I have seen in Maine." Many different places were advocated, for Maine has many beautiful spots, but anyone might be pardoned for advancing the claims of the old James Weston place in Harrison. High on a hill it seems to command and look down on the surrounding country and a wonderful panorama is spread out to the observer. We have not a surveyor's eye, but it looked to us as if we topped everything but Bell Hill.

Long ago there were three sisters, Sally, Sukey and Milly Spurr. Sally married James Weston in 1825 and went to housekeeping in this old house where each year to cement the family ties and to think for a little of the long ago. Milly married Joseph Knight. Sally never married but lived with Milly in a little white house in Otisfield long known as "Aunt Sally's" and Aunt Milly's house, both living to a ripe old age, but Mr. Knight died long before.

This James Weston place, besides its beautiful location, is also remarkable for its old-time atmosphere and the preservation of the old furniture. Here are no antiques bought and sold, but the country. These are genuine family pieces, the very things that James and Sukey used when they lived and worked and loved and died there. This place is now the summer home of Mrs. James Weston Twitchell, who each year opens the whole house to the clan, and aided and abetted by Mr. Twitchell dispenses a lavish hospitality that knows no bounds.

The day was perfect—reunion day is always a beautiful day.

It takes many visits to really see all the objects of interest of the old time gathered here. Each year we note something of interest not observed before.

This time, would especially mention the "smoke tongue." Now, how many of our readers know what "smoke tongue" is? A pair hangs on each end of the mantle over the big fireplace; a small light pair of tongs, not joined in the usual manner of tongs, but of tanged but of a pair of shears. With these one reaches into the fireplace, took out a small coal and lighted his pipe, while with one especially bent handle the tobacco was tamped down in the bowl of the pipe. These were brought here by Joseph Spurr, son of John Trypena Hancock, moved to Maine from Wrentham, Mass., in 1778. Also of much interest was the noon mark on one of the windows. "What is a noon mark?" asked one inquiring guest. "This is a diagonal mark cut by a knife on the window stool. When the sun reaches the mark it is noon and the clock was set by it. The scribe had heard of a 'noon mark' before but had never seen one."

A beautiful dinner was served at noon in the dining-room and this is always an enjoyable feature of the day.

Last year we mourned the tragic death of one of the pillars of this organization—Albert Weston, who died this year an even more dreadful accident to one of our number. This time a sweet young girl, Elizabeth Weston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spurr Weston of Brookline, Mass.

The oldest member of our clan, C. P. Spurr, of South Bridgton, eighty-seven years old, was not able to be present on account of physical infirmities, but sent his greetings to the gathering and received theirs in return. The second oldest member, also one of the Spurr side, was present but we don't dare tell how old she is for no one who saw her there would believe us.

Our number remains the same as usual for we have one new member, Mr. Spurr Longley, eight months old, who was present in person and won all hearts by his lovable personality and winning ways.

In the afternoon we were called to order by the president, William S. Spurr. Officers were elected for the coming year and an informal program in charge of Mrs. Gertrude Barrows rendered as printed last week.

Mrs. Twitchell served the company with iced tea and as we separated to return to our homes, it was with a firm resolve to be back next year.

The register showed these present: Lydia Spurr, Margaret Lovewell, Florence L. Stuart, Rebecca L. Shedd, Josephine F. R. Weston, Gertrude Barrows, Alice Weston Wilbur, Melville R. Wilbur, Anna Nevins, Grace Spurr Gay, Clara Spurr Berry, Nellie E. Hanson, Ida D. Berry, Fred C. Weston, Edith C. Weston, Carrie L. Horr, Georgia Weston, Ethel F. Calef, Robert Spurr Weston, William S. Spurr, L. M. Longley, Gertrude Weston, Virginia Weston Hagar, Janice Hagar, A. C. Lovell, Mark A. Twitchell, Howard L. Hagar, Harlow Hagar, Forrest Longley, Nancy Longley, John Martin Longley, Charles Spurr Longley, Robert Spurr Weston 2nd, and Joseph P. R. Weston.

Golden Moments

O. O. McIntyre, the columnist, writes interestingly in the current issue of the Compost, on the highlights of his twenty years in the newspaper game. Probably very few of us can lay claim to the thrills this veteran scribbler has experienced. A ringside seat at every prominent sporting event, friendship with the great and the near great, the famous and the not so famous; trips to the great cities of the world and a more than passing acquaintance with those exalted personages who make the front pages of the nation's papers. Few of us, indeed, may ever enjoy the thrill of sipping our cordial from the sidewalk tables of the Cafe de la Paix or hob-nob familiarly with the entertainers of a Broadway hot-spot.

Fancy, if you can, the joy of interviewing the flamboyant Tex Guinan or accosting the genial Cobb with a "Hi, Irv, old-scout. How's the boy?" Such exalted moments are indeed the rewards of the gods of the Fourth Estate. Even if the age and file must take their tolls viciously through the eyes of another, we have all had our exciting moments when our cup of joy seemed running over.

Perhaps it was the day you wore your first long pants; there's a kick to be long remembered by a youngster. Perhaps it was the day your dad said to you, "Wall, son, guess you're old enough now to have a key of your own. Don't stay out after 10 and be sure and take off your shoes in the front hall."

Perhaps it was the day the little girl who sat in the next seat to you on a train snarled smiled at you when you gave her the luscious red and gold Bartlett pear from your father's orchard.

Probably, for the older person, the supreme thrill came on that first Armistice day when the world went mad with joy. Whistles tooting, sirens screaming, automobiles honking and over all a snowy layer of confetti cascading down from open windows. Blazing tar barrels, every known and unknown form of noise maker, speeches to which no listener and nobody was expected to, fire crackers and factory whistles, hilarity and hoarseplay.

Though we may never have taken tea with the Prince of Wales or kissed the hand of a queen, those of us who tasted the joys of that first day of peace can truly say, "I have lived." Truly, no one person may have a monopoly on happiness. As for me, give me that delicious and magic thrill of landing my first fish at the age of seven and the Old Manly of the world, poor fellows, may have the rest. And may they never know what they've missed.

If you owned the earth, you wouldn't cut any tree. There are thousands of millions of planets besides the one you live on.

ELMS THREATENED BY DISEASE

Over two hundred elms have been found affected by the Dutch Elm disease in New Jersey. This is a distinct threat to these noble and graceful trees which contribute so much to the beauty of Maine. If the disease is present in New England, it should be stamped out immediately.

The chief effects of the disease are sudden wilting of the leaves, bending of the tips of the twigs, brownish discoloration in the sapwood, and final death of the tree.

If the disease is found, or even suspected, twigs and small branches from one-quarter to one inch in diameter, and from five to ten inches in length, should be sent to the Plant Pathology Department, Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Maine.

Specimens should be taken from a part of the tree that has recently wilted or died, and sent securely wrapped in paraffined or waxed paper with a letter giving the location of the tree and name of sender.

We can cross America in a few hours. Are we better men and women than those who crossed it in a covered wagon?

Youth spreads its wings—and the world clips them.

WILSON'S MILLS

Man Drowned in Magalloway River—Schools Opened—Church Vacation.

The body of Charles E. Peabody of Gorham, N. H., was found in the Magalloway River just above the Magalloway bridge, Sunday noon, Sept. 3. His car had stood beside the road since Saturday afternoon, but was thought to belong to campers. As no one appeared to claim it, an investigation was made and addresses were found in the car, which enabled the authorities to notify relatives who arrived before the body was discovered. It is thought that he was after water for his radiator and as the bank is very steep and rocky at this point that he lost his footing and fell into the river and was unable to climb out. The coroner, Dr. Stanwood of Rumford, pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

William B. Garfield of Cambridge, Mass., and friends, Joseph McKinnon, John Cleary and Dan Murphy, were at Camp Schell's Rest over the Labor Day week end.

Several parties are at Parmachenee and Boscawen camps and many guides are in demand.

School began at Wilson's Mills, Tuesday, Sept. 5th, and the teachers, Miss Gwendolyn Mann of Livermore Falls for the Junior High, and Miss Ruby Ritchie of Auburn for the Primary Department, have arrived and are boarding at Lester Littlehale's.

Miss Grace Allenson, who has been spending the past month with her sister, Mrs. Leon Bennett, has returned to her teaching duties in Torrington, Conn.

If Mothers Only Knew

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms, and Their Mothers do not know what the trouble is.

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, etc.

Mrs. E. W. Stephan, 31 Kenner Road, Dorchester, Mass., wrote:—"My little girl's freedom from children's diseases, colds, constipation, etc., I attribute in a large measure to the use of Dr. True's Elixir."

Dr. True's Elixir

Laxative Worm Expeller

A pure herb medicine, not a harsh stimulant: natural relief from constipation.

Your Child's Future

THE biggest job you have ever had, parents—that of caring for your children—is safeguarding their health so that their future happiness and success may be assured.

Nothing is more important to them than their eyes. No child is healthy without healthy eyes. No child can achieve success without good vision.

There's only one way to tell whether or not your children's vision is normal—have their eyes examined. Do it now before school begins.
